1.0 Background

There has been an increasing tendency of policy activities and development activities on reducing risk from climate-induced natural disasters globally and locally. Bangladesh is highly vulnerable to the adverse impacts of extreme climate events with floods, tropical cyclones, tornadoes, storm surges, droughts, and so on. In addition, the country is experiencing rainfall variability, riverbank and coastal erosion, saline-water intrusion, and many other natural disasters every year. Changes in intensity and frequency of extreme weather events as well as deviations from average weather are affecting annual development programs in different geo-physical areas of the country.

The Local Government Division (LGD) with technical support from United Nations Development Program (UNDP) is planning to establish a mapping system for climate vulnerability index (CVI) in Bangladesh up to the union level. This CVI mapping will be helpful in formulating budgetary provision for the annual development of the union level administration. In addition, the CVI data can easily identify the overall pattern of climate vulnerability in different corners of this country from rural to urban settings. Most of the LGI are unable to continue their development programs since spending almost all the development budget to cope with the climate-induced disasters. Therefore, an annual development budgetary provision in considering with climate-induced disasters should be crucial in the development strategy.

The assessment of climate vulnerability is still with multiple limitations. The methods for vulnerability assessment are changing continuously and they are not in the uniform concept. In Bangladesh, there are a few large-scale studies on vulnerability assessment, mainly for districts with equal vulnerability component weights. Therefore, the results are confusing as the vulnerability component weights differ significantly. This study aims to produce CVI mapping up to the lower administrative tier e.g., Local Government Institutions (LGI) as well as Pouroshava (Municipality), and City Corporations.

The Government of Bangladesh is giving priorities for the grassroots level development through LGI. Therefore, the CVI map data will help assess budgetary provisions as well as formulation of policies for improving the socioeconomic conditions of the people of this country. This will help the government for developing a national level database regarding climate-induced hazard exposure and sensitivity as well as adaptive capacity. Policymakers and development partners can utilize this database for achieving different Sustainable Development Goals.

2.0 Climate Vulnerability and Bangladesh Situation

Climate induced disasters may be the major obstacle to development in many countries. Climate change can influence disaster risks in two ways: firstly, through increases in weather and climate hazards, and secondly through increases in the vulnerability of communities, particularly where people are economically poor and exposed to natural hazards. Apart from projected extreme climatic events of the future, many changes are already being observed indicating adverse impacts on both natural and human systems (IPCC, 2014; UNISDR, 2013).

Bangladesh is one of the most vulnerable countries to both disasters and climate change. The country has a good track record of disaster management with climate change into account. Most development projects in the country address reducing vulnerability to disasters or poverty, and it is how local people have their own coping capacities. Tropical cyclones, tornadoes, floods, coastal and riverbank erosion, droughts, and landslides are the major climate-induced hazards in Bangladesh. Bangladesh is ranked the seventh extreme disaster risk-prone country in the world as per the report from the Global Climate Risk Index (Eckstein et al., 2021). Changes in climate trends with variability and extreme events in Bangladesh including temperature increase, increase of annual mean rainfall, frequent severe floods, intensity of cyclones, frequency of monsoon depressions, salinity in coastal areas are the priority issues in the development aspects of this country. The current situation predicted that by the middle of this century, this country could lose nearly one-fifth of its land (Lázár et al., 2020; Steckler et al., 2021) and nearly a million (De Lellis et al., 2021) coastal people would be displaced due to the present rate of sea level rise. The figure could be increased to nearly five million by the end of this century (Bell et al., 2021).

The Bay of Bengal registers about 7% of the major cyclones of the world and the frequency of high to very high intensity cyclones have increased between 20% to 26% between 1877 to 2005 (Singh, 2007). Intense cyclones such as Sidr occurred in 2007, Aila in 2009, Bulbul in 2019, Amphan in 2020 as well as severe floods have caused massive devastation to coastal regions (Das et al., 2020; Nur et al., 2021). Bangladesh has a very long history of tropical cyclones that caused the coastal area destruction, loss of human lives, and extensive property damages (Alam et al., 2020). About 500,000 and 140,000 people have lost their lives by two notable tropical cyclones that made landfall in the coastal areas of Bangladesh in 1970 and 1991, respectively (Alam and Dominey-Howes, 2015; Sattar and Cheung, 2019). Cyclone Sidr that occurred in 2007 killed more than 3,500 people and incurred around $1.67 billion US dollars' worth of economic loss (Alam et al.,

2020). Cyclone Aila which made landfall in 2009 caused 190 deaths, injured 7000 people, and destroyed more than half a million houses (Ahmed et al., 2016). Due to low-lying coastal regions, many people will be at risk under the scenario of storm surges with future sea-level rise (Mullick et al., 2019). In the aftermath of the cyclone, it is estimated several hundreds of thousands of people are still triggering a wave of human migration from coastal belts. The vulnerability of tropical cyclones is a big concern (Sahoo and Bhaskaran, 2018). The future climate change scenarios mainly the sea-level rise may accelerate the tropical cyclonic vulnerability to a greater extent (Appelquist and Balstrøm, 2015; Moon et al., 2019).

Drought is one of the most complicated and recurring extreme climatic disasters in Bangladesh (Salam et al., 2021a; Uddin et al., 2020; Zhang et al., 2019). Drought is one of the major threats to reduce crop production in Bangladesh (Ahmed et al., 2019) due to extreme temperature and low rainfall and significant change of local climate change in recent times (Mardy et al., 2018; Zinat et al., 2020). These disasters affect millions of people and cause tremendous environmental degradation, loss crop production, livelihood problems, social crisis, economic disruption, and loss of lives (Islam et al., 2017; Islam and Khan, 2018; Salam et al., 2021b; Tasnuva et al., 2020). Bangladesh is considered a highly tropical cyclone-prone country, the studies related to tropical cyclonic vulnerability are linked to the assessment of tropical cyclone risk, and vulnerability patterns in coastal Bangladesh. Vulnerability assessment by integrating sufficient criteria of vulnerability elements, such as physical, social, and mitigation capacities, is essential to generate detailed and authentic vulnerability information (Rashid, 2013).

More than four-fifth of the area in Bangladesh are recognized as crops producing region. To cope with the detrimental impacts of floods, cyclones, drought and other extreme climatic events on crop production, it is needed to aware people about the hazard and risk from different natural and climatic events to ensure disaster-resistant (e.g., drought-resistant, saline-resistant) agricultural system for food security as well as the livelihood security. In addition, disaster preparedness and mitigation strategies will reduce risks from different climatic extremes and natural disasters. Therefore, could minimize the losses and thus make a climate-induced disaster-resilient society.

3.0 Goal and Objectives

The main objective of the study is to prepare Climate Vulnerability Index (CVI) mapping up to the LGI level (District Upazila, Union, Municipality, and City Corporation) as well as to prepare spatial dashboard for a quick understanding of CVI patterns in different administrative units in Bangladesh.

The specific objectives of the study will fulfil the assigned main objective. They are as follows:

- To develop a CVI methodology based on climatic data and other climate-induced disaster-related data as well as secondary attribute data (social, environmental, economic).
- To downscale the climatic data with the spatial resolution of 5 arc-minutes (10km x 10km) for CVI mapping to cover LGI.
- To analyse the CVI following the climatic events, exposure, sensitivity, and adaptive capacity up to the union, upazila, and district levels; and
- To prepare maps for CVI to figure out areas with different vulnerability zones with updated data; and
- To prepare a dashboard with ArcGIS software and a web page to visualize the CVI data and maps in different LGI.

4.0 Data and Methods

The design for this study was composed mainly of problem formulation, relevant available data, data analysis and interpretation, as well as performing geospatial analyses with a GIS output for CVI mapping. The relevant spatial and attribute data were mainly collected from secondary sources as well as grey literature. There are three different types of data used for CVI: (a) exposure e.g., climatic data with atmospheric hazards, land-sea hazards, and surface elevation; (b) sensitivity e.g., demography, household, infrastructure, livelihood and hydrology; and (c) adaptive capacity e.g., education, employment, road network, disaster response, and so on. Figure 1 shows the flow diagram for conducting CVI analysis and mapping.

The relevant spatial land-base and facility-based information were utilized for CVI mapping. Boundary information with different administrative units was collected from different secondary sources, e.g., Survey of Bangladesh (SoB), Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics (BBS), Local Government Division (LGD), and Center for Environmental GIS (CEGIS). The geophysical information, soil classification, digital elevation with topography, arable lands, hydrological data, cyclone shelters in coastal areas and more were required for this study. They were collected from BBS, SoB, Department of Agricultural Extension (DAE), Soil Resource Development Institution (SRDI), Water Resource Planning Organization (WARPO), Bangladesh Water Development Board (BWDB), and so on. Moreover, topographic maps and satellite imageries were also utilized for this study.

Exposure Data: The climatic data in terms of average monthly minimum temperature, average monthly maximum temperature, and average monthly precipitation were collected from the Bangladesh Meteorological Department (BMD). This BMD data was based on 30 years (1991 to 2020) information. In addition, the atmospheric hazard data, in terms of floods, flash-flood, drought intensity, storm surge, and cyclones were collected from BMD, Bangladesh Country Almanac (BCA), CEGIS, LGED; and Banglapedia – the National Encyclopedia of Bangladesh. Moreover, land-sea hazards include riverbank erosion, shoreline erosion, shoreline accretion, soil salinity, groundwater salinity, sea level rise and so on. This land-sea hazard data was collected from Bangladesh Country Almanac (BCA), LGED, CEGIS.

A schematic flow diagram for conducting the climate vulnerability index and mapping

Sensitivity Data: For sensitivity analysis, it is vital to consider several relevant attribute information. The study considered several parameters, and they are based on the six priorities in the context of Bangladesh. They are: demographic characteristics, household pattern, livelihood and employment (e.g., agriculture, fisheries, livestock, small cottage industries, education and other primary, secondary and tertiary economic activities), connectivity (e.g., road, river and rail transportation), water supply, sanitation, hygiene (WASH) characteristics, and access to health. The information were collected from BBS, BWDB, DAE, Department of Public Health Engineering (DPHE), LGED, SRDI, WARPO, and so on.

Adaptive Capacity: Information about adaptive capacity (AC) were utilized to complete the CVI analysis. The AC information includes the level of education, employment, household patterns, basic facilities, food security, social network, and disaster response. All the information about the above-mentioned indicators were collected from BBS, BCA, CPP, DAE, Department of Disaster Management (DDM), DPHE, FFWC, LGED, Power Division and Energy and Mineral Resources Division (EMRD) under the Ministry of Power, Energy and Mineral Resources (MPEMR), SPARRSO, and so on.

Climate Data Downscaling: The climatic data from 1991 to 2020 from 35 meteorological stations across the country were collected from BMD. However, it was not sufficient to cover the LGI level across the country. Therefore, the collected climate data were downscaled to 5 arc-minute (10 km x 10 km) of spatial resolution to meet the climatic situation at LGI Level (Figure 2). Downscaling of the BMD provided climate data analysed through Inverse Distance Weighted (IDW) method with the spherical model from ArcGIS (licensed version 10.8.2) for LGI level distribution. The IDW interpolator is a point estimation technique based on the weighting of a random function for a particular cell node of a grid (Seron et al, 2001). The IDW interpolator assumes that each input point has a local influence that diminishes with distance. It weights the point closer to the processing cell greater than those further away, hence the name IDW interpolation or Inverse Squared Distance (ISD) interpolation (Isaaks and Srivastava, 1989). The average monthly minimum temperature, the average monthly maximum temperature, and the average monthly rainfall were downscaled for this study.

Calculation of CVI. Since the CVI is expressed with the function of exposure (E), sensitivity (S), and adaptive capacity (AC), it was calculated with the given formula option:

$$CVI = \frac{(E + S) + (1 - AC)}{3}$$

In calculating the CVI, it was considered to categorise the indicator classes of exposure, sensitivity and adaptive capacity with the weighted value ranging from “0” to “1”. The selected categories were very low (≤ 0.20), low (0.20-0.40), moderate (0.40-0.60), high (0.60-0.80), and very high (≥ 0.80). After analysing the CVI for each LGI, the CVI mapping was prepared with ArcGIS software.

5.0 Results

Mapping for the indices of Vulnerability Indicators. CVI is expressed with the function of exposure, sensitivity, and adaptive capacity. The calculation process of CVI is based on main variables of exposure (E), sensitivity (S), and adaptive capacity (AC) that are comprised with some sub-variables, and each sub-variable was comprised of different correlative components that is known as indicator variables. Following the weighted average values for each variable of E, S, and AC, the exposure index, sensitivity index, and adaptive capacity index for each administrative units across the country was calculated.

District Level Mapping

The pattern of spatial distribution of different indicators of climate vulnerability index: (a) exposure index; (b) sensitivity index; and (c) adaptive capacity index at the district level

The analysis of exposure, sensitivity, and adaptive capacity indices across Bangladesh reveals varying degrees of climate vulnerability among districts. For the exposure index, 37.5% of districts fall into the low and very low categories, while 32.8% are in the high and very high categories, with Mymensingh, Sherpur, and Gazipur having the lowest exposure, and Barguna, Patuakhali, and Bagerhat having the highest. In terms of sensitivity, 20.4% of districts are in the low and very low classes, with Mymensingh, Dinajpur, and Tangail being the most sensitive, while Narayanganj, Moulvibazar, and Munshiganj show the least sensitivity. For adaptive capacity, 67.2% of districts rank high or very high, with Bandarban, Rangamati, and Gaibandha displaying the lowest adaptive capacities, while Barguna, Munshiganj, and Feni have the highest. These indices provide a comprehensive understanding of climate vulnerability across Bangladesh's districts.

Upazila Level Mapping

The pattern of spatial distribution of different indicators of climate vulnerability index: (a) exposure index; (b) sensitivity index; and (c) adaptive capacity index at the upazila level

At the Upazila level, exposure mapping shows that 11.72% of upazilas are in the very low category and 30.70% in the low category, while 21.01% fall in the very high and 11.11% in the high exposure categories, with Sherpur Sadar having the lowest exposure and Barguna Sadar the highest. Sensitivity mapping reveals that 7.07% of upazilas are in the very low category, 15.76% in the low category, and 34.34% in the very high category, with Rangabali having the highest sensitivity and Rupganj the lowest. For adaptive capacity, 7.90% of upazilas fall in the very low category and 11.09% in the low category, while 26.05% are in the very high and 23.87% in the high category, with Alikadam having the lowest adaptive capacity and Betagi the highest. These mappings provide insights into the varying climate vulnerabilities and capacities across the upazilas of Bangladesh.

Union Level Mapping

The pattern of spatial distribution of different indicators of climate vulnerability index: (a) exposure index; (b) sensitivity index; and (c) adaptive capacity index at the Union level

An analysis of the unions in Bangladesh reveals that 16.28% of unions are categorized under very low exposure levels, 23.44% as low, 21.37% as very high, and 15.83% as high, with the lowest exposure in Dhaljora Union (Gazipur) and the highest in Badarkhali and Dhalua Unions (Barguna). Sensitivity mapping shows 12.31% of unions fall in the very low category, 15.28% in low, 40.32% in very high, and 16.13% in high, with the lowest sensitivity in Kanakpur Union (Moulvibazar) and the highest in Durgapur Union (Gazipur). For adaptive capacity, 11.66% of unions have very low capacity, 14.47% low, 32.33% very high, and 25.80% high, with the lowest adaptive capacity in Tindu and Remakri Unions (Bandarban) and the highest in Kurarbazar Union (Sylhet). These classifications help visualize climate vulnerability across unions in Bangladesh.

Urban Level Mapping

The pattern of spatial distribution of different indicators of climate vulnerability index: (a) exposure index; (b) sensitivity index; and (c) adaptive capacity index at the urban level

An analysis of Pauroshavas in Bangladesh revealed that 17.02% of the 329 Pauroshavas fall into the very low exposure category, 20.36% in the low, 17.63% in the very high, and 15.81% in the high category, with 29.81% classified as moderate. The lowest exposure index was recorded in Nabinagar, Mirzapur, and Bakshiganj Pauroshavas, while Hatiya recorded the highest. In terms of sensitivity, 35.56% of Pauroshavas were in the very low category, 21.28% in the low, 13.07% in the very high, and 14.29% in the high category. Sonargaon had the lowest sensitivity, and Kuakata the highest. For adaptive capacity, 71.12% of Pauroshavas were in the very high category, with Lama registering the lowest adaptive capacity and Betagi the highest. Among City Corporations, 50% were in the very low exposure category and 50% in the very high, while adaptive capacity ranged from very low to very high with no City Corporations in the moderate or high category.

In considering the City Corporation, only 2 (16.7 percent) City Corporations were in the very low category, and 1 City Corporation was within the very high category of CVI. Moreover, 4 (33.3 percent) City Corporations were in the low category followed by 3 (25.0 percent) in the moderate, and 2 (16.7 percent) in the high category of CVI level. The lowest CVI was recorded in Dhaka North City Corporation (0.416) and the highest CVI was recorded for Khulna City Corporation (0.549). Figure 8.4 shows the spatial distribution pattern of CVI in the urban areas of this country.

Spatial Mapping for CVI. Applying the methodology adopted for this study, the CVI was calculated for different administrative units in Bangladesh following the indices of exposure, sensitivity, and adaptive capacity. In the district level CVI mapping, some 2 (3.1 percent) districts were within the very low category and 11 (17.2 percent) in the low category. Some 13 (20.3 percent) of the districts were in the very high category and 18 (28.1 percent) were found to be in the category of high level. Moreover, 20 (31.3 percent) districts were within the moderate category of CVI. Patuakhali (0.570) and Bandarban (0.553) districts were found to be in the very high category of CVI. Moreover, Munshiganj (0.408) and Narayanganj (0.416) were the districts with very low category of CVI.

6.0 Recommendations

This study identifies a number of strengths regarding its LGI level information and mapping. There is no study in Bangladesh up to LGI level as it was mentioned in this report. LGI based CVI is relevant because of its very low Modifiable Aerial Unit Problem (MAUP) since it covers the micro-level information in Bangladesh. The results for CVI at LGI level are suitable for justifying budgetary aspects for DDR. Moreover, planning for disaster management with budgetary provision and allocation as well as monitoring can be possible with the study outcomes.

Short-Term Initiatives

- A proper SOP is required for utilizing this report for disaster prevention, preparedness, response, and recovery.
- Arrangement of trainings on climate vulnerability and its adaptation capacity to different stakeholders as if people can get awareness about climate vulnerability and coping and adaptive strategy. LGD can take the lead with technical assistance from LoGIC in this aspect.
- Inter-ministerial coordination (e.g., between LGD and MoDMR) is a prerequisite for disaster risk reduction with potential measures using CVI.
- A policy for Annual Development Plan (ADP) for disaster risk reduction and climate change adaptation at LGI level can be formulated following this CVI data.
- A noble continuous monitoring mechanism can be introduced for proper operation and management to improve the newly developed mechanism.

Long-term Initiatives

- Several in-depth research on diversified issues of CVI and its proper and scientific utilization would be important for improving the policies regarding CVI with new dimension.
- A detailed and comprehensive analysis for climate damage function with social cost for each LGI level should be developed with geospatial mapping. This would cover resource accounts for both the funded and non-funded financial assets for each household and government properties.
- It is possible to make directions to LGI for taking CVI into consideration in case of local level planning and budgeting. LGD may issue the directions.
- CVI should continuously be updated subject to the availability of relevant data.
- IEC materials should be prepared following different steps of disaster prevention, preparedness, response, and recovery.

7.0 Concluding Remarks

The calculated CVI at LGI level in Bangladesh is a novel study for climate change and climate-induced disasters. The vulnerability pattern as well as the CVI pattern in different geophysical areas in Bangladesh would be the background for DRR budget allocation at the LGI level. Moreover, this CVI would be effective in planning for economic development as well as for the social development of the country.
